Karna when grown up, was made king of Anga by Duryodhana, and Lecame by virthe of his many generous acts a type of charity. On one occasion Indra (whose care it was to favour his son Arjuna ) disguised himself as Brahmana and cajoled him out of his divine armour and ear-rings, and gave him in return a charmed javelin. With a desire to make himself proficient in the science of war, he, calling himself a Brahmana went to Parasurama and learnt that art from him. But his secret did not long remain concealed. On one occasion when Parasurama had fallen asleep with his head resting on Karna's lap, a worm ( supposed by some to be the form assumed by Indra himself to defeat Karnas object ) began to eat into his lap and made a deep rent in it; but as Karna showed not the least sign of pain, his real character was discovered by his preceptor who cursed him trat the art he had learnt would avail him not in times of need. On another occasion he was cursed by a Brahmana (whose cow he had unwittingly slain in chase) that the earth would eat up the wheel of his chariot in the hour of trial Even with such disadvantages as these, he acquitted himself most valuantly in the great war between the Pandavas and Kauravas, while acting as generalissimo of the Kaurava forces after Bhishma and Drona had fallen. He maintained the field against the Pandavas for three days, but on the last day he was slain by Arjuna while the wheel of his chariot had sunk down into the earth. Karna wes the most intimate friend of Duryodhana, and with Sakuni joined him in all the various schemes and plots that were devised from time to time for the destruction of the Pandavas ]. -Comp. -अंजालि: the auditory passage of the outer ear. - sam: Yudhishthira - ar तिक a. close to the ear ; स्वनसि मृदु कणातिक वर: S. 1. 24. -अंद्र: -दू f. an ornament for the ear, ear-ring. -31-र्पन giving ear, listening. -आस्फाल: the flapping of the elephant's ears —इंद: f. a semicircular ear-ring. -उत्तस: an ear-ornament or merely an ornament (according to some authorit.es ) (Mammata says that here कर्ण means कर्गेस्थिनन्व ; cf. also his remark ad loc:-कणवितंसादिपदे कर्णादिव्यनि-निर्मितः । संनिधानार्थबोधार्थ स्विते व्वतत्समर्थन ॥ K. He is the son of Siva (but born without the direct intervention of a woman). Most of his epithets have reference to the circumstances of his birth. Siva cast his seed into Agni (who had gone to the god in the form of a dove while he was enjoying Parvata's company ), who being unable to bear it cast it into the Ganges, (hence Skanda is called Agnibhu, Gangaputra ). It was then transferred to the six Krittikus when they went to bathe in the Ganges ), each of whom therefore conceived and brought forth a son But these six sons were afterwards mysteriously combined into one of extraordinary form with six heads and twlve hands and eyes, ( hence he is called Karttikeya, Shadanana, Shammukha &c. ). According to another account the seed of Siva was cast by the Ganges into a thicket of reeds (Sara), whence the boy was called Saravambhva, or Sarajaninan. He is said to have Krauncha, pierced the mountain whence his name Kraunchadarana. He was the commander of the army of the gods in their war with Taraka, a powerful demon q v whom he vanquished and slew, and hence his names Senani and Tarakajit. He is represented as riding a peacoult. ] -Comp. -- ut: f. Parvatî, mother of Karttikeya.

[Krishna is the most celebrated hero of Indian mythology and the most popular of all the deities. Though the real son of Vasudeva, and Devaki and thus a cousin of Kamsa, he was, for all practical purposes, the son of Nanda and Yasoda by whom he was brought up and in whose house he spent his childhood. It was here that his divine character began to be gradually discovered, when he easily crushed the most redoubtable demons, such as Baka, Pûtana &c., that were sent to kill him by Kamsa, and performed many other feats of surprising strength The chief companions of his youth were the Gopis or wives of the cowherds of Gokula, among whom Radha was his special favourite ; ( cf. Jayadeva's Gîtagovinda ). He killed Kamsa, Naraka, Kesin, Arishta and a host of other powerful demons. He was a particular friend of Arjuna, to whom he acted as charioteer in the great war, and his staunch support of the cause of the Pandavas was the main cause of the overthrow of the Kauravas. several critical occasions, it was Krishna's assistance and inventive mind that stood the Pandavas in good stead. After the general destruc-tion of the Yadavas at Prabhasa, he was killed unintentionally by a hunter named Jaras who shot him with an arrow mistaking him at a distance for a deer. He had more than 16000 wives, but Rukmin and Satyabhama ( as also Radha ) were his favourites. When his father proposed to make Yudhishthira heir-apparent, Duryodhan did net like the idea, as his father was the reigning sovereign, and prevailed upon his blind father to send the Pandavas away into exile. Varanavata was fixed upon as their abode, and under pretext of constructing a palatial building for their residence, Dunyodhana caused a palace to be built mostly of lac, resin and other combustible materials, the eby hoping to see them all destroyed whon they should enter it But the Pandavas were forewarned and they safely escaped They then lived at Indra-prastha and Yudhishthira performed the Rajasûya sacrifice with great pomp and splendour This event further excited the anger and jed-ousy of Duryodhana who was already vexed to find that his plot for burning them up had signally failed, and he induced his father to invite the Pandavas to Hastinapura to play with dice (of which Yudhishthira was particularly fond ) In that gambling-match, Duryodhana, who was ably assisted by his maternal uncle Sakuni, won from Yudhishthira everything that he staked, till the infatuated gambler staked himself, his brothers, and Draupads herself, all of whom shared the same fate. Yudhishthira, as a condition of the wager, was forced to go to the forest with his wife and broth rs, and to remain there for twelve years and to pass one additional year 22cognito. But even this period, long as it was, expired, and after their return from exile both the Pandavas and Kauravas made great preparations for the inevitable struggle and the great Bharat: war commenced. दुष्यंत: N. cf a king of the lunar race, descendant of Puru, husband of Sakuntal's and father of Bharata. Once upon a time Dushyanta, while hunting in the forest, went to the hermitage of the sage Kanva, while pursuing a deer. There he was hospitably received by Sakuntala, the adopted daughter of the sage, and her transcendent beauty made so great an impression on his mind that he prevailed on her to become his queen, and married her according to the Gandharva form of marriage. Having passed some time in her company the king returned to his capital After some months Sakuntala was delivered of a son, and her father thought it advisable to send her with the boy to her husband. But when they went and stood before Dushyanta, he (for fear of public scandal) denied all knowledge of having ever before seen or married her. But a heavenly voice told him that she was his lawful wife, and he thereupon admitted her along with the boy, into his harem, and made her first queen. The happy pair lived to a good old age, and committing the realm to the care of Bharata, retired to the woods. Such is the account of Dushyanta and Sakuntala given in the Mahabharata. The story told by Kalidasa differs in several important respects; see "Sakuntala. "].

इपद N of a king of the Pancha. las. [ He was a son of Prishata. He and Drona were school fellows, as they learnt the science of archery from Drona's father, Bharadvaja. After Drupada had succeeded to the throne, Drona, when in pecuniary difficultiess, went to him on the strength of his former friendship, but the proud monarch disrespected and slighted him. For this Drona afterwards got him captured by his pupils the Pandavas, but was kind enough to spare his life, and allowed him to retain haif his kingdom But the defeat sustained by him at Diona's hands rankled in his soul, and with the desire of getting a son who would avenge the wrong done to him, he performed a sacrifice, when a son named Dhrishtadyumna (and a daughter called Draupada) sprang up from the fire. This son afterwards treacherously cut off the head of Drona see Drona also ]

Though a Brahmana by birth, he was well-versed in the science of arms which he learnt from Parasurama. He afterwards taught the Kauravas and the Pandayas the science of arms and archery. When, however, the great war commenced, he attached himself to the side of the Kauravas, and after Bhîshma had been mortally wounded- 'lodged in the cage of darts '-he assumed the command of the Kaurava forces and maintained the struggle for four successive days, achieving wonderful exploits and killing thousands of warriors on the Pandava side. On the fifteenth day of the battle the fight continued even during the night, and it was on the morning of the 16th that Bhima, at the suggestion of Krishna, said within Drona's hearing that Asvatthaman was slain, (the fact being that an elephant named Asvatthaman had fallen on the field ). Being at a loss to understand how that could be, he appealed to Yudhishthira, 'the truthful' who also, at the advice of Krishna, gave an evasive reply --uttered loudly the word Asyatthaman and added 'Gaja or elephant 'in a very low tone; see Ve. 8. 9. त्रापदी [ दुपद्स्थापरंथ ज्ञा-अण ङोप् ]

N. of the daughter of Drupada, king of the Panchalas. [She was won by Arjuna at her Svayamvara ceremony, and when he and his brothers returned home they told their mother that they had that day made a great acquisition. Whereupon the mother said "Well, then, my dear children, divide it amongst yourselves." As her words once uttered could not be changed, she became the common wife of the five brothers. When Yudhishthira lost his kingdom and even himself and Draupadi in gambling, she grossly insulted by Duhsasana q. v. and by Duryodhana's wife. But these and the like insults she bore with uncommon patience endurance and on several occasions, when she and her husbands were put to the test, she saved their credit (as on the occasion of Durvasas begging food at night for his 60,000 pupils ). At last, however, her patience was exhausted, and she taunted her husbands for the very tame way in which they put up with the insults and injuries inflicted upon them by their enemies; (see Ki. 1. 29-46) It was then that the Pa'ndayas resolved to enter upon the great Bharats war. She is one of the five very chaste women whose names one is recommended to repeat; see अहत्या ]. द्रापदेय: A son of Draupadi ; Bg .1. 6, 18.

Note. A few of the common Nya. yas or popular maxims are here collected for ready reference and arranged in alphabetical order.

1. अंधच्डकन्याय: The maxim of the blind man catching a sparrow, analogous in sense to मृण्किर्याय q v.

2 sieuvivueque: The maxim of the blind following the blind. I is used in those cases where people blindly or thoughtlessly follow others, not caring to see whether their doing so would not be a leap in the dark.

- 3. असंधतीद्श्वनन्यायः The maxim of the view of the star Arundhati The following explanation of Sankaracharya will make its use clear:- अर्मवर्ता दिद्शियलुस्तरसमीपस्था स्थूला तारामग्रस्या प्रथममस्थतीति ग्राह्यित्वा ता प्रत्याख्याय पश्चाद्रस्वतीनेव ग्राह्यति-
- 4. अज्ञोकविकाल्याय: The maxim of the grove of Asoka trees. Ravana kept Sita in the grove of Asoka trees, but it is not easy to account for his preference of that particular grove to any other one, so when a a man finds several ways of doing a thing, any one of them may be considered as good as arother, and the preference of any particular one cannot be accounted for.
- 5. अइमलोष्ट्रन्याय: The maxim of the stone and clod of earth. A clod of earth may be considered to be hard as compared with cotton, but is soft as compared with a stone. So a person may be considered to be very important as compared with his inferiors, but sinks into insignificance when compared with his betters. The maxim is also used to denote the relative importance of two things, though absolutely both may be bad ; e. g. गोपालपरशुरामी उभावपि अ-तीव दुर्मेयसी । किंतु अइमलोष्ट्रन्यायेन गोपालः परशु-रामाद्वरीयान्. of Mar. 'द्गहापेक्षां वीट मऊ.' The maxim पाषाणेष्टकन्यायः is similarly
- 6 सदंबकोरक (गोलक) न्याय: The maxim of the Kadamba buds, used to denote simultaneous rise or action, like the bursting forth of buds of the Kadamba tree at one and the same time.
- 7. काकतालीयन्याय: The maxim of the crow and the palm-fruit. It takes its origin from the unexpected and sudden fall of a palm-fruit upon the head of a crow (so as to kill it) at the very moment of its sitting on a branch of that tree; and is used to denote a very unexpected and accidental occurrence, whether welcome or unwelcome, of. Chandialoka:—
  यचा मेलन तन लाभो में यश्च युद्धवः। तदेतत्काकवालीयमवितकितसमं ।। also Kuvalayananda:—पतत् तालफल यथा काकिनापुक्तमेव रहोव्यानश्चानितहृद्धा तेन्दी प्रया मुक्का। see काकतालीय also.
- 8. काकदंतगर्वेषणन्यायः The maxim of searching after a crow's teeth, used to denote any useless, unprofitable, or impossible task.

- 9. काकाक्षिगोलकन्यायः The maxim of the crow's eyeball. It takes its origin from the supposition that the crow has but one eye (cf. words like प्रदृष्टि, प्रमाञ्च &c), and that it can move it, as occasion requires, from the socket on one side into that of the other; and the maxim is applied to a word or phrase which though used only once in a sentence, may, if occasion requires, serve two purposes: e. g. द्विषाइक्ष्यामंतरीय इत्यत्र अञ्चिषामित्यस्य काञ्चियामंतरीय इत्यत्र अञ्चल्यामित्यस्य काञ्चलाप्यक्यायेन अतरीयशब्देनाप्यक्ययः
- 10. कूपपंत्रचिकान्यायः The maxim of the buckets attached to the water-wheel. It takes its origin from the fact that while some of the buckets filled with water go up some are emptied of their contents, while others go down quite empty; and is used to denote the various vicissitudes of worldly existence; cf. काश्चिनुच्छयति प्रपूर्यति वा काश्चित्रयायुक्तिं काश्चित्रयातिष्यो करोति च पुन. कार्रिश्चयावुक्तान्। अन्योन्यगतिषक्षमंहतिमिमां लोक-स्थितिं वीययविष क्रीडित कृपपत्रचिटिनान्यायप्रसक्तिविधः ।। Mk. 10. 59.
- 11. चहुन्दीप्रभातन्यायः The maxim of day-break near a toll-station. It takes its origin from the attempt of one (say, a cartman) who with the intention of avoiding a toll takes at night an unfrequented road, but unfortunately finds himselfet day-break near that very toll station, and is obliged to pay the toll which he studiously tried to avoid. Thus the maxim is used to denote the occurrence of that which one studiously tries to avoid; of. Srîharsha:—नदिदं चहुन्दीप्रभातन्यायमञ्चव्हति
- 12. gongaterala: The maxim of letters boiled by an insect in wood. It takes its origin from the unexpected and chance resemblance of an incision in wood or in the leaf of a book made by an insect to the form of some letter, and is used to denote any fortuitous or chance occurrence.
- 13. द्वाप्यन्यय: The maxim of the stick and cakes. When a stick and cakes are tied together, and one says that 'the stick has been pulled down or eaten by a rat,' we are naturally led to expect that the cakes also have been pulled down or eaten by the rat, as a matter of course, the two being so closely connected together; so, when one thing is closely connected with another in a particular way, and we say something of the one, it naturally follows that what we assert of the one can, as a matter of course, be asserted of the other; cf. धूषिकण दहो मिलत इत्यनन तत्सहचरितमपूष- मश्जनधीदायातं भवतीति नियतसमानन्यायाद्धीतरमापनतीत्येष न्याया दंडापूषिका।। S. D. 10.

14. देहलीदीपन्याय: The maxim of the lamp placed over the threshold. It takes its origin from a lamp hanging over the threshold of a house which, by its peculiar position, serves to light the rooms on both sides, and is used to donote something which serves a two-fold purpose at the same time.

- 15. जपनापितपत्रन्याय: The maxim of the king and barber's son. It is used to denote a man's innate fondness for his own possession-howsoever ugly or desticable in the eyes of others. It takes its origin from a story which states that a king on one occasion asked his barber to bring to him the finest boy that he could see in his kingdom. The barber roamed for a long time over every part of the realm, but could discover no boy such as the king wanted. At last wearied and disappointed, he returned home, and being charmed with the beauty of his own boy-who, to do him justice, was a personification of ugliness and deformity-went to the king and presented the boy to him. The king was at first very angry with the barber for having trifled with him, but on consideration excused him, as he ascribed the barber's preference of his own ugly boy to the dominant desire of human beings to consider their own possessions as supremely good ; cf. सर्वः कांतमात्मीय परुयति डि. 2.
- 16. पंकाशालनन्यायः The maxim of washing off the mud. Just as it is more advisable for one to avoid getting into mud than to get into it and then wash it off, so it is more advisable for one to avoid getting into danger than to expose oneself to it and then try to get out of it somehow or other; cf. সমালনাত্রি पंकस्य বুধাব্যক্তিন বং, and also "Prevention is better than cure."
- 17. विष्येष्णन्याय: The maxim of grinding flour or meal, used to denote a superfluous or unprofitable exertion like the attempt of a man to grind pounded flour; cf. कृतस्य कर्ण ब्या-
- 13. बीजांकुरन्याय: The maxim of seed and sprout. It takes its origin from the relation of mutual causation which subsists between seed and sprout, (seed being the cause of sprout which in its turn is the cause of seed), and is used in these cases where two things stand to each other in the relation of both cause and effect.

19. लोहचुंबकत्याय: The maxim of iron and magnet; it is used to denote a very close affinity between two things, by virtue of which they are instructively attracted towards each other, though at a distance.

20. बह्नियमन्यायः The maxim of the invariable concomitance of fire and smoke, (wherever there is smoke there is fire). It is used to denote such invariable concomitance between two persons or things; (e.g. where there is A, there is B, where there is not B, there is not A).

21. विषक्तिन्यायः The maxim of the worms bred in poison. It is used to denote a state of things which, though fatal to others, is not so to those who being bred in it, are inured or naturalized to it, like poison which, though fatal to others, is not so to the worms bred in it.

22. विष्युसन्यायः The maxim of the poison-tree; used to denote that a thing, though hurtful and mischievous, does not deserve to be destroyed by the very person who has reared it, just as even a poison-tree ought not to be cut down by the planter himself.

23. वीचितरंगन्यायः The maxim of a wave urging forward a wave. In the ocean one wave propels another till the first and all others in succession reach the shore. So this maxim is used to denote successive operation, as in the case of the production, of sound.

24. बुद्धकुमारीवाक्य ( वर ) क्याय: The maxim of the old virgin's boon; that is, asking such a boon as will cover all that one wishes to have. The Mahabhashya says that an old virgin, when asked by Indra to choose a boon, said:— प्रा मे बहुई। र वृतमोदनं कावनपात्रमा मुजीस्त. This one boon, if granted, would give her a husband, progeny, abundance of corn, cattle &c, and gold.

25. शाखांच्यायाः The maxim of the bough and the moon. As the moon, though considerably distant from the bough of a tree, is spoken of as 'the moon on the bough,' because she appears to be near it, so this maxim is used when the position of an object, though at a very great distance, is fixed by that of another object to which it appears to be contiguous.

26. सिंहावलोकनन्याय: The maxim of the lion's backward glance. It is used when one casts a retrospective glance at what he has left behind, while at the same time he is proceed ing, just as the lion, while going onward in search of prey, now and then bends his neck backwards to see if anything be within his reach, see under सिंह also.

27. स्वीकटाइन्याय: The maxim of the needle and the kettle. It is used to denote that when two things -the one easy and the other difficult-are required to be done, the easier should be first attended to, as when one has to prepare a needle and a kettle, he should first take in hand a needle as it is an easier work compared with the preparation of a kettle.

28. स्थालीपुलाकन्याय: The maxim of the cooking-pot and boiled rice. In a cooking pot all the grains being equally moistened by the heated water, when one grain is found to be well cooked, the same may be inferred with regard to the other grains. So the maxim is used when the condition of the whole class is inferred from that of a part; cf. Mar. 'शितावस्त माताची परीक्षा'.

29. स्थुणानिखननयायः The maxim of digging or fixing in the post. As a stake or post to be firmly fixed in the ground is again and again moved and thrust inward, so this maxim is used when one (say, a disputant) adds several corroborative illustrations, arguments &c. to strengthen and confirm still more his strong position.

30. स्वामिभुत्यन्याय: The maxim of master and servant. It is used to mark the relation of the feeder and the fed, or the supporter and the supported, subsisting between any two objects.

पुरुवस्य m. [ cf. Un. 4. 231 ] The son of Budba and Haand founder of the lunar race of kings [ He saw the nymph Urvasi, while descending upon earth owing to the curse of Mitia and Varune, and fell in love with hei Urvasi, too, was enamoured of the king who was as renowned for personal beauty as for truthfulness, devotion, and generosity, and became his wife. They lived happily together for many days, and aftar she had borne him a son, she returned to the heaven. The king heavily mourned her loss, and sne was pleased to repeat her visits five successive times and bore him five sons. But the king, who wanted her life-long company, was not evidently satisfied with this, and he obtained his desired object after he had offered oblations as directed by the Gandharvas. The story told in Vikiamoi vasîya differs in many respects, so does the account given in the Satapatha Brahmana, based on a passege in the Rigveda, where it is said that Urvasi agreed to live with Puluravas on two conditions :- namely that her two rama which she loved as children must be kept near her bed-side and never suffered to be carried away. and that he must take care never to be seen by her undressed. The Gandharvas, however, carried away the rams, and so Urvasz disappeared].

[ Prithu was the son of Vena, son of Anga. He was called the first king, from whom the earth received her name Prithva. The Vishnu Purana relates that when Vena was wicked by nature and prohibited worship and sacrifice, was beaten to death by the pious sages, and when consequently robbery and anarchy prevailed in the absence of a king, the Munis rubbed the right arm of the dead king to produce a son, and from it sprang the majestic Prithu, glowing like Agni. He was immediately declared king, and his subjects who had suffered from famine, besought the monarch for the edible fruits and plants which the earth withheld from them. In anger Prithu took up his bow to compel her to yield the spply so much needed by his subjects. She assumed the form of a cow and began to flee chased by the King. But she at last yielded and requested him to spare her life, and at the same time promised to restore all the needed fruits, plants &c, 'if a calf were given to her through which she might be able to secrete milk.' Prithu thereupon made Svayambhuva Manu the calf, milked the earth, and received the milk into his own hand, from which proceeded all kinds of corn, vegetables, fruits &c, for the maintenance of his subjects.
